

The Western Branch Canadian Psychoanalytic Society is pleased to present its Annual Scientific Meeting to interested clinicians.

This year's conference: “Listening, Dreaming, Sharing: On the Use of the Analyst's Inner Experiences,” focuses on the analyst's inner experiences and their contribution to the listening process, the analyst's interventions, and the therapeutic action of psychoanalysis.

By means of several clinical vignettes, Dr Jacobs will illustrate the role of the analyst's subjectivity and the way that it may be used in treatment, and raise questions about the place the analyst's reactions have in psychoanalysis. Dr Jacobs will discuss how the analyst's inner experiences may be used to enhance the listening process and to provide useful clues to important material being transmitted unconsciously by the patient.

Learning Objectives:

1. To review the topic of analytic listening and to discuss its complexity.
2. To discuss the role of the analyst's subjective experiences in the listening process.
3. To illustrate with a clinical example how the analyst's inner experiences may be used to enhance the listening process and to provide useful clues to important material being transmitted unconsciously by the patient.
